BLAKE	Sarah Ann	Jun 12, 1847	Aug 26, 1849	2y 2m 14d	d/o James & Sarah BLAKE

The 1790 U. S. Census shows James Blake is the head of household living in Rapho Twp., Lancaster Co., PA. There are 2 males 16 and over; 1 male under 16; and 2 females.

This township at that time lay along the northern boundary of the county and included the first low range of mountains of the Appalachian chain. Tax records list James Blake as a "founderer" which was an important and skilled job in the iron furnaces which dotted South Mountain from Berks County to the Maryland border. A high grade of iron ore was mined in this area from earliest days to the present time. As mines developed we find the "iron master" taking his skilled workers from place to place, so a study of the movement of the Blake family follows along the line of furnaces from the Mt. Hope Furnace Lancaster Co., where his record first appears, to the furnace in Drumore township near the Susquehanna river, thence to Maryland a back again to Pennsylvania in Franklin, Huntingdon and Blair Counties.

Notes on Fergus' MOREHEAD

Notes

Fergus received 5 pounds in the will of Samuel Moorhead, Sr.. There are likely two reasons why Fergus was cut off with so little. firstly, that his portion of the family money had been used up to establish him in Westmoreland County, and secondly, that he was still missing and presumed dead since he had been kidnapped by Indians the previous year of 1777.

Fergus left Samuel for Westmoreland County in May of 1772. Samuel son Samuel, Jr. followed Fergus shortly after to Westmoreland County.

Notes

Fergus and Jane White also had a son named Jason who was killed at Perry's victory on lake Erie.

Jane White Moorhead had been left with three small children and soon After her husband's capture, gave birth to a fourth, which was named by his mother Fergus after his father. In the meantime one of the children had died of smallpox, and upon Mrs. Moorhead devolved the duty of placing her child in a silent grave. Shortly afterwards she was visited by her brother, who assisted in boxing up and burying her provisions and effects, after which accompanied him on horseback to her former home in Franklin County, where she remained until the unexpected return of her husband, for all had given him up for lost.

Mrs. Moorhead left home and all its endearments, with a heavy heart when Fergus decided to move in 1772. But, being a woman possessing great energy of character and touched perhaps with that romantic spirit peculiar to that period of which we are writing, she pressed forward with a firm step and a resolute heart, determined to share with her devoted husband the dangers and trials of the wilderness.

Samuel, Jr., received 200 acres upon the death of Samuel, Sr. of the Plantation.

Will dated March 4, 1777, Proved February 11, 1787 Franklin Co. Will Book Vol A. Page 17.

Samuel Moorhead's fathers name may of been JOHN. There is an unconfirmed date for a marriage in 1730 between Samuel and Euphemia.

The first record of Samuel Moorhead in the United States is the record of a birth of a daughter in 1731 in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania.

In 1735 Samuel is recorded as having 200 acres surveyed in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. On August 25, 1738 another 300 acres was granted in Hopewell Township, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania in then what was a frontier region. The land became part of Cumberland County, when that county was formed in 1750, and then Franklin County, when Franklin was formed in 1784. That land is now in Hamilton Township, within the town of Chambersburg.

Samuel added more land over the years. Surveys of 300 acres in 1762 and 1768. Tax rolls lists Samuel as having 248 acres, 2 horses, 2 head of cattle, and paying a tax of 20 pounds, 14 shillings. In 1779 he is recorded as owning 600 ares, 2 horses, 4 head of cattle. The 1780 listing shows 1200 acres, 2 horses and 6 head of cattle. 1781 sees a listing of 600 acres again, but four sons: Fergus, Alexander, Joseph and Thomas have 200 acres each. In 1782 all five sons, including Samuel, JR., are listed with 200 acres each but so is Samuel, SR.

Samuel is recorded in history with several different land disputes: one against a Mr. Adam Hoop, another Against a man named Mathew Black, William Rankin, George Campbell, David Black, and William Craig.

Samuel wrote his will in 1777 which was proved in 1787. The following abstract appears in actual records.

MOORHEAD, Samuel: Hamilton Township, Cumberland County, Pa. Mentions son-in-law and daughter Thomas and Martha Espey. son Alexander-200 acres of land -WHERE HE FORMERLY LIVED-being part of the testator's plantation in Hamilton Township. Son Samuel 200 acres, same Euphemia appears to have died in 1785. For whatever reason for the late probate of the will (perhaps it had been found among her effects), it appears that Samuel had died before her.
